How does the Reliance Life Traditional Golden Years Plan work?

The plan works in two parts - the Accumulation Period (i.e. the Policy Term) and the Distribution Period (i.e after the Vesting Date). The Accumulation Period is the time when you build your Account values through premium payment.

You pay premium every year for the entire term and get accumulated value which will be maintained in a separate account called 'Accumulation Account' in respect of each policyholder, which will be credited with accumulation rate at the end of every calendar month.

The accumulation rate shall be applied proportionately to any increase in the Account values.

An additional accumulation account will be maintained for any additional premiums paid.

After the Vesting Date, the Annuity Payments begins. Vesting Date means the date from which the pension will start.

What is an Accumulation Account?

Accumulation Account is a separate account specially maintained for you.

All the premiums you pay will be credited in the Accumulation Account after deducting the Allocation fees for the relevant year.

The rate of allocation fees under the plan is stated below.

Year	Allocation Fee as percentage of annualised premium
Year 1	15%
Year 2 onwards	5%

The rate of allocation fees under Additional premiums will be 2% of the Additional premiums. In addition to the premiums, your Accumulation Account will be credited with Accumulation Rate. The Accumulation Rate will be declared in advance at the start of every financial year. However this will be added to your account pro-rata at the end of every calendar month.

While there is no upper limit on the Accumulation Rate that will be declared from year to year, the company undertakes that the Accumulation Rate to be declared in future will not be less than the Savings Bank deposit interest rate declared by the Reserve Bank of India (RBI).

The Accumulation Rate for the FY 2010-11 will be 7.75% p.a. Annually, declared Accumulation rate would be available on our website www.reliancelife.com

Once the Accumulation rate is declared and credited to the Accumulation Account and Additional Accumulation Account, it will be guaranteed for the rest of the policy term.

After adding the Accumulation Rate to your Account, we shall deduct Account Administration fees of 1.25% p.a. of the account value, at the end of every calendar month.

There shall be monthly deductions of Policy Administration Fee of Rs 40 per month from your Accumulation Account.

What is an Additional Accumulation Account?

Any additional premium that you pay over and above the regular premium will be credited into this account after deducting the Allocation fees of 2% of the Additional premiums paid.

At the end of every calendar month, the Additional Accumulation Account will be credited with the Accumulation rate on pro-rata basis. The Accumulation Rate on Additional Accumulation Account will be at the same level as the rate declared on the Accumulation Account.

After addition of the Accumulation rate, Account Administration fees of 1.25% p.a. will be deducted from the Additional Accumulation Account, at the end of every calendar month. There will not be any further deductions from the Additional Accumulation Account.

We shall accept the additional premiums as long as all the due premiums under your base policy are paid.
